ANNETTE LITSTER

BVSc PhD FANZCVSc (Feline Medicine) MMedSci (Clinical Epidemiology)
Specialist in Infectious Disease and Feline Medicine,
CAD Veterinary Specialty Operations, Zoetis

Dr. Litster graduated as a veterinarian in 1982 from The University of Queensland in Australia. She is a boarded feline internist (FANZCVSc) and holds a PhD (2001) and a Masters of Medical Science (MMedSci) in Clinical Epidemiology (2006).

Prior to obtaining her specialization, Dr. Litster worked in small animal general practice and specialist feline practice for 17 years. She moved to the United States in 2007, where she was a tenured Associate Professor of Small Animal Internal Medicine at Purdue University. While at Purdue, Dr. Litster was founding Director of The Purdue Maddie's Shelter Medicine Program, an integrated program of research and teaching focused on feline and canine infectious diseases, animal welfare and preventative medicine. She has authored over 60 journal articles and book chapters.

Dr. Litster is a popular speaker at major national meetings and over the past 3 years alone has spoken at VMX, Western Veterinary Conference, AAHA, the national AVMA meeting, the ACVIM Forum, and many major regional AVMA and continuing education meetings. She is the co-Editor in Chief of The Veterinary Journal and is a member of the AAFP Cat Friendly Practice Council. Dr. Litster joined Zoetis as a Senior Veterinary Specialist in January 2014.
